SPIEGEL Media

Brief Portrait

DER SPIEGEL has rightly been synonymous with investigative journalism in Germany for 80 years. The way it researches facts and informs its readers is what sets it apart from all other media in our country. DER SPIEGEL's journalism is characterised by thorough research and reliable information.
SPIEGEL editors report independently of political, economic, ideological and religious interests, equally carefully and truthfully. „Tell it like it is", Rudolf Augstein's guiding principle, is the driving force behind the SPIEGEL editorial team.

The SPIEGEL editorial team of around 500 people uncovers grievances with its reporting, sets the news, provides context in a complex world and sets the pace in the public debate. The journalistic offerings, printed or digital, reach over twelve million people every week. Its reach and journalistic standards make the DER SPIEGEL brand a trusted and respected authority in the German media landscape.

DER SPIEGEL not only reaches its core target groups with great accuracy, but also achieves maximum reach in many marketing-relevant target groups, including people with a high level of education, in upmarket professions and with purchasing power that enables selective consumer behaviour. SPIEGEL readers appreciate the unique concept, the high journalistic reputation and the unmistakable style of the SPIEGEL editorial team.
